More and more stories are being brought to light about how Blacks and other minorities who are trying to become involved in the economic mainstreams of the country are being ripped off by those who have been appointed by the Nixon Administration to assist them in getting loans to start their businesses.

These stories are not myths, but documentary evidence reveals that they are fact. One of the first minorities issued a contract in the Bay Area under the, then, newly organized 8 (a) Set Aside Program, a program in which the Small Business Administration acted as the prime contractor and the minority contractor, because of bonding and other insurance problems, became the sub-contractor, the minority contractor had to do work on the house of one of the high officials in the Regional Office of the SBA. He received no pay.

Other cases involved kick-backs in the form of money and, in some instances, part of the business to officials and advisory board members of the SBA. These are real, and they are public information for the ones who dare to reveal them.

It has been reported that minority businessmen who held 8 (a) contracts were told that they would buy a table of ten for the "Blacks For Nixon" fund raising dinner held in Washington just prior to election. This money was turned over to the Committee for the Re-election of the President. The sad part of this is that they money was not needed for the Republican Party had enough funds for the re-election program. In fact they had monies left over which will be contributed to the '76 election and the people who were forced to buy ten $100-a-plate seats could not afford to make this $1,000 donation.

The threat issued to these minorities stated that the SBA would be "taking a hard look at those minorities who failed to make this contribution and had 8 (a) contracts, and those who failed would lose their contracts." It is unnecessary for me to point out that few refused.

True to their word, many of those that refused lost their sub-contracts. This is how the story came to light.

In this issue of our publication there is a story about Bob Brown, Special Assistant to the President, having received an $836,651 contract after he left the services of the administration. This contract was supposed to be set aside for the disadvantaged. Bob, whose salary was $36,000 per year, surely could not have been categorized as being one of the disadvantaged.

There are stories of how contracts were taken from one minority and given to another who "paid" for it. This pay was in the form of kick-backs. These and many more have caused this writer to devote space in this editorial column to reveal the new plight of the American Black who is trying to become an asset rather than a liability; Who is trying to pull up from his "bootstraps"; Who is seeking a chance, not charity, and who is being prostituted by those, both of his and other races, to prevent him from enjoying the feeling that he has become a producer, not just a receiver.

These mercenary individuals have prevented the minority from providing jobs for other minorities, helping to reduce the welfare roles. They have driven minorities, who could have helped stabilize the nations economy out of business. They have given monies to people who obviously were not interested in going into business to provide a track record of failures. They have committed extortion, and other crimes, and they certainly deserve to go to jail for their crimes.

The President will long be remembered for the Watergate affair, but history will also reveal that he has done more for minorities than any other President since Abraham Lincoln. I am sure he is not aware of what a few scum who have been entrusted to aid those who truly deserve it have done to his excellent program.

Word has been received that a Senate Investigating Committee will be holding hearings relative to the above. It is the time for those minorities that have been coerced, bribed and extorted to come forth. It is no time to remain silent. Let us clean up this mess once and for all, regardless of where the chips may fall.

If we remain silent at this time, we deserve all that they have done to us, and more.

Voluntary Energy Curtailment Is Urged By PG&E

Conserve energy voluntarily or face the possibility of mandatory curtailment! This was the message from a Pacific Gas and Electric Company spokesman at a recent news media conference in Pismo Beach.

Northern and Central California have been in good shape for energy until recent months, when cut-backs in natural gas supplies, delays in construction of nuclear plants and difficulties in finding the required amounts of environmentally acceptable oil in the tight world market have combined to threaten power shortages next year, he said.

A. James McCollum, company manager of public information, said, "PG&E is searching diligently all over the world for oil and is continuing its extensive quest for new supplies of natural gas in Canada, the Yukon Territory, the Rocky Mountain area, California and Southwest."

Other California utilities face similar problems in finding boiler fuel for steam-electric generation, he said, and the California Public Utilities Commission is coordinating efforts to meet potential power shortages through establishing curtailment plans on both voluntary and mandatory bases.

PG&E has fueled its steam-electric generating plants with natural gas 90 to 95 percent of the time in the past, burning oil only during cold snaps when priority call on gas is given to firm residential and commercial customers. The annual requirement for oil was about two million barrels, and domestic oil supplies were always adequate and priced at about $2 a barrel.

Next year, McCollum said, the company will require 45.4 million barrels. Under the new air pollution control standards it must be low-sulfur oil, which is not available domestically and which is priced currently at about $7 a barrel on the world market.

About two-thirds of the low-sulfur oil reserves in the free world are in the Middle East, and competition for that oil is heavy among the nations in the world, McCollum stated. He added grimly "and there's a shooting war as well as an oil war going on there right now."

The company has been urging the public, through advertising and other means of communication, to eliminate wasteful uses of gas and electricity and has suggested numerous ways energy can be conserved in the home.

PG&E experts in power service for commercial and industrial applications are calling on their more than 2,000 large-scale electric customers to achieve the same conservation objectives and to help plan schedules for curtailment on both voluntary and mandatory bases, McCollum said.

If voluntary curtailment fails to conserve energy adequately, he said, the only alternative will be a system of mandatory cut-offs.

Former Nixon Aide Gets SBA Loan

A former $36,000-a-year special assistant to President Nixon has received an $836,651 Defense Department contract earmarked for the disadvantaged.

Robert J. Brown, former special assistant for minority affairs, also applied for a second contract but was turned down.

The contract prompted House Banking Committee investigator Curtis Prins to remark that he didn't think anyone who had worked for a high salary in the White House was disadvantaged.

The Small Business Administration, which negotiated the contract for the Defense Department, defended its action.

"Because Brown is who he is and who he was, the particular contract was gone over from stem to stern," said Randall Woods, assistant SBA administrator for public affairs.

"This contract was awarded long after Bob Brown left the White House," Woods added.

"There was an unusual amount of documentation. It definitely is legitimate from top to bottom," he said.

The loan stems from the program authorizing the SBA to act as subcontractor for the government to funnel federal dollars to disadvantaged and minority firms. The SBA certifies firms as eligible for the program and then finds them government contracts which are awarded on a non-competitive basis.

Last July, a firm owned 50 percent by Brown was awarded an $836,651 Defense Department contract to operate mess halls at El Toro Marine Base in Southern California.

While Brown was in the White House, the SBA detailed to him Paul A. Laurakas, an SBA minority business development specialist. Soon after Brown quit in February, Laurakas also left government service. He now works for Brown's consulting firm, SBA sources said.

Hospital, Red Cross Join Hands In Blood Program

Community Hospital and the Red Cross have joined hands to make it more convenient for volunteers to donate blood on the Monterey Peninsula.

Effective immediately, volunteer blood donors may contribute either at Community Hospital or at the mobile collecting unit of the Central California Red Cross Blood Program when it comes to the area. Hospital appointments may be made weekdays between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Under the new program, to be called the Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Program, the hospital's daily requirement of 10 to 12 blood units is to be met by both Red Cross volunteers and long-time donors to the blood bank at the hospital.

The cooperative agreement was arranged by hospital representatives Thomas E. Tonkin, president and administrator, and Dr. Osman H. Hull, director of laboratories, and Red Cross representatives Dr. Donald Avo, director of the Central California Red Cross Blood Center, Mrs. Florence Cape, Monterey County District chairman, and Barney L. Laiolo, Carmel.

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula is a certified Blood Component Therapy Center and Blood Bank and has collected much of its own requirements for blood from volunteer donors. When necessary, the hospital supplemented its blood needs from the Red Cross Blood Center in San Jose.

Only blood from strictly volunteer donors will be utilized, assuring high quality control that is sometimes lacking when paid donors are used. No charge will be made to patients for the actual blood, the blood component or replacement of either. However, there is a processing fee charged on all units to cover the considerable technical cost necessary for safety to the recipient. A fresh supply of blood for local use will be assured at all times as only the blood actually needed will be drawn.

Community Hospital and the Red Cross will jointly promote the volunteer blood donor concept and recruitment of volunteer blood donors to satisfy the community blood needs.

The hospital and the Red Cross will work cooperatively to maintain a properly balanced inventory of blood and blood components and will annually review and evaluate the processing fee. And they will work together in training and orientation of personnel both voluntary and staff to implement and continue successful function of community blood services.

A spokesman said that in addition to the personal satisfaction of contributing to a worthwhile community program, there is the transfer of blood credits and other benefits to be derived from donating blood. Either the hospital or Red Cross will be glad to tell you about these and to sign you up as a donor.

SSG R. Cardwell
ARMY RECRUITER

Hi everyone.

There was a time not long ago, when great numbers of people in this country, firmly believed that they could do their children no greater service than to undertake the financing of their college education. Slowly, but very surely, that is changing. And the reason it is changing is because, for the first time in a long while, college students are significantly represented in local unemployment lines.

Recently, a well-known magazine did an in-depth study of the problem and the probable trends that would eventuate. Within the text of the article, many young graduates and employers were quoted extensively. Understandably, young people who had spent four years of their lives in pursuit of something that they have only recently discovered is meaningless, were considerably embittered.

As one put it, "I wish somebody would have told me this four years ago. I could have saved myself a lot of time and money. Your whole life, people are always telling you to study hard so you can go to college and then get a good job. And what happens? When you graduate, there are no jobs."

Many employers now find that the nature of the work they offer many young people, does not often require a degree to perform. Bright high school graduates with pertinent aptitudes and some solid experience in administrative matters will begin to find themselves considered for positions, only previously offered those with degrees. That is why many parents are now encouraging their sons and daughters to position themselves intelligently with growing businesses which will recognize their ambitions and talents.

TODAY'S ARMY pays a young person $326.10 a month to start. In addition, TODAY'S ARMY provides free room and board, complete medical and dental care and a paid 30 days vacation annually. Since December 1, 1973, TODAY'S ARMY has a new option called Stripes For Skills. This new option will entitle an enlistee to enlist in a higher grade dependent upon the experience he has.

Urges Care When Shopping By Mail

In an effort to avoid the Christmas shopping crowds many people have turned to shopping by mail. The Department of Consumer Affairs urges all consumers to be as conscientious when shopping by mail as when shopping in person.

If you are planning to shop by mail this year, send your order early. Check the order to see if there is a guaranteed delivery date. If you will not accept merchandise after a certain date specify it on your order.

Before ordering from a catalogue, check with your local Better Business Bureau to see if the company is still in operation. Often mail order catalogues are around homes for a number of months or even years before an order is placed. If the company has closed, filed bankruptcy, or is in financial difficulty the BBB will often know.

Don't be misled by photographs or advertising claims. Read the description. If important information is missing such as size and weight, be on your guard. The description should provide enough information to judge quality and compare the product to others.

When you have finished with your copy of The POST, pass it on to a friend or relative.

In your order specify the item you want by color, size, quantity, etc. Also list any item you are willing to accept as substitute. If you receive an item that is not as ordered return it to sender and specify if you want a replacement, credit, or refund.

Open a package as soon as it arrives and check for damage or mistaken items. Many companies have 10-30 day deadlines for return. If sending gifts directly to another party be sure to ask if they arrived and in good condition.

Always pay by check, money order or credit card. DO NOT SEND CASH.

If a problem arises and letters to companies go unanswered contact the Department of Consumer Affairs, Division of Consumer Services, 1020 N Street, Sacramento, or your local Better Business Bureau.

Get 'Care' Instructions When Buying Yardage

The woman buying her clothes will find a "care" label on each garment today -- required by the Federal Trade Commission since July, 1972. But the woman sewing her own clothes may have to dig further to get the information she needs about fabric care, according to the State Board of Dry Cleaners, a unit of the Department of Consumer Affairs.

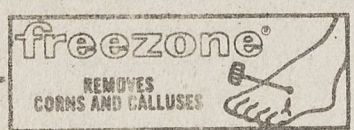

Under FTC regulations, fabric manufacturers should supply "care" instructions with yard goods. The Board recommends that you ask the salesperson for a copy of these instructions when you buy yardage. To double-check these instructions, the Board suggests you ask your local dry cleaner or launderer for advice, as well.

Your Mayor Reports

COUNCIL RESPONSIBILITIES

Our City Council today faces an ever expanding and confusing array of major and minor policy responsibilities. Some are legally mandated and range from deciding on zoning requests to acting as an appellate body to hear and fairly decide our Planning Commission appeals. Some are traditional in nature, like representing the City at Chamber of Commerce installation dinners or attending a citizen complaints.

Some City Council responsibilities are created by the individual styles or interests of Council Members, which may include attempts to develop an expertise in one municipal service area or function as the watchdog over this activity. The manner in which individual Council Members carry out these responsibilities would require a very comprehensive discussion and analysis about the dynamics of human motivation, resistance, fears, leadership and other complexities of human behavior.

The City Council should accept responsibility for determining and periodically revising overall goals for the community it serves. It is my considered judgement that City Council members, collectively and individually, are finding it progressively more difficult to maintain in a clear perspective regarding their primary role and responsibilities. This difficulty can be attributed to many origins including the increasing complexity of City government and attendant problems of usually part-time Council Members in staying knowledgeable about City services and heightened involvement of citizen groups and other governmental units in City government which has altered the historical and somewhat uncontested policy making prerogatives of City Councils. However, the City Council must cope with these developments since the overall effectiveness of City government remains dependent, in large part, on how well each Council Member exercises leadership and takes action on critical policy issues that will confront our City.

In this regard, the Council has a major responsibility to exercise political leadership within our community. This responsibility is sometimes neglected due to the time constraints facing most part-time council members or avoided because of political risks. I also assume that council members usually have sufficient political capability since they do get elected to office. However, for this political capability to have meaning for city government, it needs to be harnessed into a positive leadership role. This role must manifest itself in the following forms:

1. Exercising individual and thoughtful analysis and judgement (which transcends the viewpoint of any particular vested interest group) regarding community service needs and alternative ways of meeting these needs;

2. Creating a condition of trust, confidence and openness between the city government and the citizens it serves, including the exploration of options and implementation of approaches for increasing the effectiveness of citizen participation in municipal goal setting, planning, and evaluation of municipal services; and

3. Equally important, assuming an advocacy position in concert with other council members, in marshalling support for meeting municipal service needs and achieving goals among citizen groups, other community agencies, business, regional, county, state and federal governmental agencies. It is further acknowledged that positive political leadership by council members may be a hazardous undertaking. There always is risk in being an independent thinker and taking a visible and positive stand on controversial public issues, particularly when facing a large group of citizens representing an opposing viewpoint in a council meeting. However, only the City Council can take these risks and exercise this leadership, since as the saying goes, "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem".

Finally, as the responsibilities of the Council are clarified and its operating practices are strengthened, attention also should be given to defining the leadership role of the Mayor as it relates to the business of the Council. The Mayor should, at a minimum, function as a "consensus coordinator", to assure that the Council takes action on the important issues brought before it and the "communication coordinator" between the Council and City Manager so that all parties are kept adequately informed.

Bob Wood Reports

As most of you know, proposals for a State lottery in California are nothing new. Hardly a session of the Legislature in recent years has been without a bill to legalize gambling in the form of bingo, off-track horserace betting or a State lottery. All have bit the dust. Our office has had many letters from constituents who wonder why we don't institute such a lottery in California. If you recall, we went out a questionnaire about a year or so ago, and it showed that in our county a slight majority favored a state lottery and I'll admit I, myself, wondered why it shouldn't work.

Many eastern states have gone into the lottery business in recent years with the idea in mind of providing more revenue without resorting to an increase in taxation. According to reports we have just received, it just hasn't worked out successfully. The experience of New Hampshire, New York, and New Jersey, with the longest-running lotteries, is a case well documented. A survey in these states revealed the lotteries are an unstable source of income, good for less than one percent of New York state's tax revenues. New Hampshire, the first state to authorize a lottery to raise funds for local schools, watched lottery revenues decline from $2.8 million to less than $900,000 in seven years.

These experiences should have more than an California. A bill for a proposed constitutional amendment legalizing a lottery system in the State already has been introduced. But we should also remember that even through we in the Legislature should approve such a proposal, it must go to a vote of the people on a statewide ballot. You would ultimately be making the final determination.

Letter To The Editor

Editor:

want to assure our customers that employees of the Seaside Post Office are moving Christmas mail with dispatch and that we fully expect to complete every delivery by Christmas Eve. The energy crisis may impose some added unforeseen burdens. Nonetheless, with broad public cooperation, we expect to make this the best mailing Christmas in recent memory.

To help us meet this goal, we are urging our customers to mail first class Christmas cards, letters and packages earlier than usual, by no later than December 8. Airmail letters and packages should be posted by December 15. We are concerned with occasional fuel shortages for both inter and intracity mail transport. To date, trucks and trains, and most planes, are moving with our mail. But periodically shortages do occur. We are also aware that airlines may not add their usual complement of extra Christmas flights, flights which traditionally help carry the extra volume of Christmas mail.

I am bringing these facts to your attention with the hope that your newspaper will join with us in helping to encourage customers to mail their Christmas cards, letters and packages earlier.

So, please help the Postal Service bring Christmas a little earlier than usual -- mail earlier, by December, or December 15, if by airmail.

As I See It

by Mel Vercoe

A large number of Congressmen replied personally after I mailed petitions to them calling for the impeachment of the President. Actually, the Constitution is quite vague in describing offenses warranting impeachment. The Congressman, Rep. Donald Fraser of Minnesota, included the following in his letter to me:

"The President, Vice President and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors. (Art. II, Section 4)

Impeachment means only that the House has decided to bring formal charges against the President. The Senate must decide whether or not these charges are valid. Upon conviction by the Senate, judgment, in the words of the Constitution, shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office or honor, trust, or profit under the United States.

Of course, an ex-President could also be prosecuted for crimes he may have committed while in office. There are many charges against the President which might sustain an impeachment resolution. I believe the most likely ones would center around:

1. Bribery... as an accomplice or accessory in the Watergate and Ellsberg break-ins.

2. Bribery... participation as an accomplice or accessory in the offer of high office to the judge sitting in judgment on the Ellsberg case.

Women's Club Holding Party

A Merry Christmas party will be held by the Monterey Peninsula Business and Professional Women's Club on Friday, December 14th at the Branding Iron in Del Monte Shopping Center, with Mrs. Donna Chenoweth of Carmel in charge of the arrangements. It will begin at 6:30 p.m. with socializing; the dinner will start at 7 p.m.

Gifts will be exchanged between members and guests who will be present; and, for the one meeting of the year, there will be absolutely no business conducted. Just fun -- in the holiday spirit.
